ACCIDENT FATAL TO CLINTON RESIDENT

J. R. Helmer, an old and respected citizen of Clinton, was knocked down and run over by a car driven by Mrs. M. Jensen, on Monday afternoon. He was quickly rushed to his home, where all that human skill could do was done for him, but to no avail. He died at 4:30 the following morning. Mr. Helmer was on his way to the chautauqua. He had just left

J. R. HELMER, his son's car and was making his way into the grounds when the car driven by Mrs. Jensen struck him, dragging him for some distance.

Mr. Helmer was born at Jordaville, New York, on May 7, 1855. On March 13, 1857, he was married to Helen M. Osborn of Richfield Springs, New York. The following year he moved west and settled in Edgerton. In 1879 he moved to Clinton, where he has lived ever since. In 1884 his wife died. In 1891 he married Clara M. Edwards. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, one son, J. R. Helmer, editor of the Rock County Banner, and two sisters, Mrs. Kate Becker of Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. Harriet Robinson of Watkins, Wis. He also leaves one brother, H. J. Helmer, of Jordaville, New York. Services were held at the home Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Interment was held in the Clinton cemetery.

JANESVILLE BOYS AT HEAD OF THE PAPER

In the edition of the Janesville Daily Bulletin of May 31st, appears the following item which will be of interest to Janesville people. C. Russell Zeininger, a graduate of the Janesville high school, and a nephew of Miss Carrie Zeininger of this city. He has been in the Philippines for many years, going there first as an officer in the Constabulary forces, and later taking up newspaper work.

Formerly, Zeininger, Stewart, for the past five years managing editor of the Manila Daily Bulletin, ceases to direct its editorial policies, in order to assist the duties of local editors in the Philippine Islands. C. Russell Zeininger, who has been associate editor of the Bulletin, succeeds Mr. Stewart as managing editor.

At the head of the editorial column also appears Mr. Zeininger's name as managing editor and below that of George L. Mader, associate editor. Mr. Mader was formerly connected with the editorial department of the Gazette and went to Manila last fall to take a position as city editor of the Bulletin. Mr. Zeininger, however, has been given a decided promotion.

ALL STARS WILL PLAY AT EAGLES' PICNIC

Tomorrow the Eagles will hold their annual picnic, which was postponed from last Sunday. Games and races will be held and refreshments will be served on the grounds. Crowley and Wall will be on the receiving line for the team. The regulars of Hagar will do the twirling.

ENTRAINMENT FOR BOYS HAS BEEN POSTPONED

FARM LABOR AGENCY, No. 150.

Farmers must be convinced that while there is a shortage of skilled farm labor, there is a sufficient supply of labor available for farming. They must make their needs known in time by notifying the Farm Labor Agency No. 150 at the Daily Gazette.

At present, most of the men needed can be secured from the unemployed through the United States Employment Service offices. By sending to the government a blank which may be obtained at the Gazette, stating the number and kind of workers the farmer desires, competent men will be available through the office.

Henry Winkler, Milton, needs three men at once.

J. C. Koenigsmann, R. 1, Janesville, needs a man.

NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH WHEN BURIED UNDER CAR OF GRAVEL

Joseph Glennon, 109 North Main street, narrowly escaped death yesterday afternoon when he was buried under a car of gravel which was unloading at the power plant of the Janesville Electric Company at the Fourth Avenue bridge.

Mr. Glennon is employed by the Rust Engine company who are installing the large rock smelter for the Electric Company. He was working on the car of gravel and in opening the trap doors he was pitched to the bottom and the gravel completely covered him.

A fall was sent to the West Side Fire Station and Chief Klein hurried to the scene with the pulmotor but the injured man had succeeded in uncovering his head enough so that he could breathe.

A few minutes of work he was extracted from the gravel and a close examination by a physician showed that he had suffered no internal injuries. He escaped with a few slight bruises.

JANESVILLE SOLDIER WRITES FROM ENGLAND

Mrs. William Leach of Johnstown has received a very interesting letter from her son Paul who is a member of the 87th Aerial Squad, stationed at London, England. Mr. Leach in his letter tells of the activities of the American soldiers in England. His letter follows:

Dear Mother:

Well this is Sunday once more and a cold, wet rainy day. I have been working all day Saturday afternoon. It is about the only time we get off from work any more. I got a letter from you today of May 10th and tomorrow is the 10th of June. I am going to get a pass to London for about three or four days as soon as we get paid. I still have the five dollar money order you sent me.

Well, I did M. F. duty or Military Police all day yesterday afternoon and last night in a small town about five miles from camp. That is to say, all of the boys behave themselves all right, and not get stewed up as a soldier can get all he wants to drink here, but he can't buy it in the town. But I would not soak my feet in the stuff you get here. But some of the fellows like it. I had a good dinner any way, all the eggs, bread and coffee I wanted, while the other fellows were paying for camp. This is certainly a pretty country here in the spring of the year. There is such funny little towns with little narrow streets and log houses plastered over or else made of brick with a thatched roof. Once in a while we see some rich people's estates such as Lords and Earls. I went on a trip a few days after a machine that had fallen on a rich man's estate. We stayed there all night and nothing was good enough for the Yankee soldiers. I guess they are thinking the Yankee army is coming to conquer after all from what the boys on the front have been doing the last few days, and I think the Germans will realize before long they are not fighting English and French together.

Well, I guess I will close for this time as paper is scarce and hard to get. What do you think of my English Royal Flying Corps stationery. I like it better than the Y. M. C. A. paper anyway. People in the States laugh at the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross, but believe me, they certainly would be lost without the Y. M. C. A. Well goodbye, love to all and write soon.

THE APEX. Electric Washer WITH SWINGING WRINGER

Action, rather than rubbing, is the way to get dirt out of clothes. APEX ELECTRIC WASHERS are built on the one correct principle of action. They secure the maximum amount of action on both the clothes and the water at the same time.

The clothes and the hot soapy water are thrown back and forth, in the all-metal tub, till the steam and suds have been driven, again and again, through the fabric, loosening and carrying away every particle of dirt.

The Apex Electric Washer Saves You

MONEY, because it reduces the washing bills; no need of hiring a laundress if you have an APEX. Cuts the soap bills and cuts the fuel bills because no need of boiling clothes.

FROM WORRY, because you can be independent of unreliable laundresses. Any day can be wash day with an APEX. It is always ready to help you or your maid with the washing.

TIME, because with an APEX your washing is finished in a third time less than by any other method. Your maid will have time for other work on wash-day if there is an APEX in the laundry.

FROM HARD LABOR ON WASHDAY, because the APEX does all the work except hanging out the clothes. It wrings as well as washes.

FROM WEARING OUT THE CLOTHES, because the APEX cleans the clothes without rubbing.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH, because you don't wear yourself all out over a washboard or turning the wringer.

The APEX saves you so much that you can't afford to be without one a day longer.

The APEX cleans all kinds of clothes by continually forcing hot water, suds and steam through and through the fabric; the very fibre as well as the surface is cleaned. In the APEX the pieces are not crushed, rolled, wadded or dragged around as in other types of machines.

Don't be a washing machine any longer - Buy an Apex

APEX Exclusive Features

No need to boil the clothes if an APEX is used. The scientific action gets all the dirt—even on collar bands, cuffs and skirt bottoms and leaves the pieces as white as if boiled.

Washing powders or dirt-removing chemicals are unknown to the APEX user. Good soap is the only help needed.

The SWINGING WRINGER, conveniently placed above the tub so that there is no awkward stooping and twisting to use it, is one of the great labor savers on the APEX. Operated in any one of four positions, it will wring clothes from rinse to blue water and to basket while others are being washed. Reversible rolls and safety release make jamming of clothes impossible—Shaft driven.

Machine all metal except the wringer. Inside of tub smooth and as easy to clean as a dishpan.—Absolutely sanitary.

Electric motor drives mechanism by unstretchable raw-hide belt, so no chance to burn out fuses or motor by over loading.

All moving parts guarded or out of the way. Automatic oiling device on main shaft prevents drying up.

Everlasting and trouble proof.

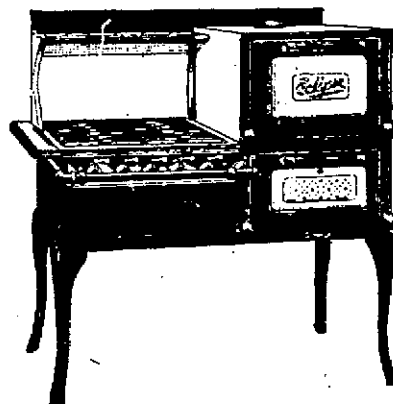

The APEX WASHER is so different, so advanced that you must see and try it to know the great advantages of its improvements. APEX washers have no equals for satisfaction and service.

Prices from $85.00 to $210.00 according to size and material.

A little gold amid the gray—
That's sunshine;
A little brightness on the way—
That's sunshine;

In these days of gloom and shadow, it is sometimes difficult to discover the silver lining which rims the black cloud, but it is there, because the sunshine is perpetual and as reliable as the clock of time, while the cloud is a passing panorama, hanging suspended in the quiet air or fleeing before the wind at rapid pace. The airman, just now operating in the mountains of Italy, spend much of their time above the clouds, but the atmosphere is so rare and the cold so intense, that they are glad to seek the lower levels, where all all-wise Creator intended the most of us to live.

The climate of California is an asset which the citizens of the Golden State never tire of proclaiming, and yet many winter visitors complain of the monotony of perpetual sunshine, and are glad to get back home where a cloudy day, every now and then is a relief. The sunshine is an evidence of creative genius, as old and as constant as time itself, while the cloud is but a passing show, here today and gone tomorrow. The weather prophets are able to forecast the weather with a degree of certainty, because of the laws of nature which govern, but they never waste any time in discussing the sun, which always shines behind the cloud, and breaks through with the slightest provocation.

The average life was created to live in an atmosphere of sunshine, and a great many of us do. The trouble with some of us is, that we see clouds where they do not exist, and so we cultivate the little worries, which come in to disturb us, until they seem intensely real. It is easy to go out in the morning, when the dew is sparkling on the grass, and the blue dome above is bright with the evidences of a perfect day, and predict that there will be no rain, but more difficult to clear the mists from our minds and possess ourselves in patience.

It is an old saying that "it never pays to cross a bridge until you get to it," and yet there are more bridges crossed in the night, when we ought to be sleeping, than are ever met by daylight. A bridge never looks quite so bad as it does after dark. There is something about the darkness that gives full play to the imagination, and all sorts of diseases confront us. If you want to cultivate any particular kind of microbe the time to do it is in the night. The "Imp of Darkness" is the old title for his Satanic Majesty, and he has long been noted for working overtime after sundown.

There comes back to many of us the memory of the voice of a mother, as she sat by our couch in the deepening twilight and dispelled the gloom by her sunny presence, and out of the memory suggests the thought that one of the choicest missions in life is to be sunshine distributors in the little circle where our lot is cast.

Strolling through a well-kept cemetery near Chicago, the other day, a friend said to his companion, "What a beautiful spot this is!" And it was beautiful, because every lot and all the unoccupied land was cared for like a private lawn, while shrubs and flowering plants lined the driveways. A beautiful place for the dead, but a mighty poor place for the living, except for an occasional hour with sacred memories, yet there are some people whose minds are so clouded by the mists and whose hearts are so burdened with sorrow that they live in thought in these cities of the dead, refusing to enjoy the sunshine of the bright outside world.

The sorrows of life are sometimes difficult to bury, but we owe it to ourselves and to our friends, to put them out of sight. The weeds of mourning may be a tribute to the memory of the eyes forever closed in the last long sleep, but they add nothing but gloom to the pathway of weary pilgrims.

The great orb of day, which swings in infinite space so far away, is the light of the world, illuminating every dark corner. When the eclipse occurred, the other day, it cast a gloom over nature in many localities, and people said: "What would we do without the sun for a day?" There are many people, in every community, who radiate sunshine every day, and so it has come to pass that the great kingdom of humanity, in spite of cruel war, is coming to appreciate the fact that every man is his brother's keeper. The eyes of the world today are turned to this fair land because of our attitude as a nation in attempting to free the world from darkness and oppression.

With a million boys in France and a million more on the way, there remains at home an army of mothers whose hearts are strangely touched with pride and solicitude. Proud of the boys because of their loyalty and patriotism, and solicitous for their safety and welfare, because she is a mother. Here is a copy of a love letter from a boy in France to his mother, in Kansas, which expresses the sentiment which every boy over there feels for his mother. It is a Mothers' Day letter.

Sunday, May 12, 1918.

My Dear Mother: So early this morning, I am going to write you, as thousands of other boys are going to write today, a love letter. This opportunity comes but once a year, and I think every boy in the service, who can wear the symbolic red rose, will spend a few minutes today in writing. And my prayer and sympathy is for the brave ones in khaki who wear the white rose.

There is small use for any of us to dwell on our love for our parents. Words cannot define or describe that love, it is sacred— infinite. The same love exists today that has existed throughout time. Generations may be born and die, but in each is the same love. Centuries may come and see unceasing strife and anarchy and bloodshed, and governments change and great men be born and die, but throughout all that is an oasis of happiness and joy in the everlasting parental love. The boys who are on the fields today are feeling the surges of that love, ever it is present in the din of battle, in danger the strain of love bridges the Atlantic and gives warning, in times when heroes are needed they are moulded but of the love that comes from so far away. You are in an "invisible grand stand" and we are actors; for you we push forward to victory and try to gain your applause, and ever is the hand of your love reaching out, pushing us on in the performance of impossible feats, and I am sure if uncertain life were to pass away there, her love would be the administering hand and death would be in her love's arms.

In the upper right hand corner of the envelope carrying this letter, I will have to place the words "Mother's Letter," which insures its delivery by our government, special delivery time. There is refreshment and peace in the thought that our great union, engrossed in so much work, building mighty navies and armies for purposes of destruction, straining every resource of transportation, in order to perfect a machine to destroy "Mother's Sons," should then remember above all things "Mother's love." "Papers of state may wait," says our government. "Great affairs may be delayed, but place those messages of love from the boys abroad into the hands of the mothers, as soon as possible." They realize the predominant spirit that spells victory is our love for mother; they realize that the unlimited expanse of motherly love will be the real negotiation for peace when the time is right, and sons of other nations are freed. The real spirit behind our nation and its accomplishments come from our mothers.

I have found a rose, up here. It is not strange that it is red. The strangeness is finding it. The room in which I am writing has sheltered German invaders, the ground around here is full of sacrificed men, both invaders and defenders; the enemy has tramped this entire part, but somehow, from among the graves, this rose found room to grow, and so I send it as a token of my love. I suppose it grew for that purpose.

What can life kill, or death undo? Your Son,
RAYMOND FIELDS.

This letter, so full of love and tenderness, came like a ray of sunshine to the mother at her little home in the western State, and the crushed red rose, which it contained, will be cherished as a sad reminder of war. Many of us are working in this country today, and living in France. We trace the long battle lines on the map and try to locate our boys at the front. The fact that we are so close to them in thought and in love, cheers them with hope and with courage, and so the sunshine of love spans the wide expanse of water and its genial rays comfort the boy and his mother.

There will come a time—God speed the day—when the armies of the world will cease to fight. A day of jubilee, because the peace which has been secured at such frightful sacrifice, will be an abiding peace, and the banner which floats over every nation will be the banner of freedom. In that glad day our boys will come back to us, and perpetual sunshine will be ours to enjoy.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

ROY E. MOULTON.

A great man is the man who fixes his own automobile. If you don't seem to realize at first glance that a great man, he will not leave you long in doubt. He will admit it. But the great man who fixes his own automobile is always fixing the wrong thing. After he fixes a thing that doesn't need fixing, that thing never works right again. After he fixes a thing that doesn't need fixing, he is so pleased with himself that he keeps right on fixing until he has the whole internal mechanism of his car making a noise like a tin peddler's wagon running away or a switch engine hauling a trainload of empty freight cars over a piece of bad track. The best way for a man to fix his own car, unless he is a natural born mechanic, is to leave it alone. Nine times out of ten it will regulate itself.

Sing a song of save and serve. Though thrifty, we are gay. We're bound to beat the Germans. And our boys are on the way. We've pledged to save our quarters. And they're pledged to save the day. While we go marching to Berlin.

Side by side we'll take our stand. We'll save from morn till night. And if we cannot get our money right. Our clothing may be dingy. But we'll keep our honor bright. While we are marching to Berlin.

Former Gov. Chase Osborn of Michigan calls Uncle Hank Ford a "rubber stamp," but in spite of that we can hardly believe that Uncle Hank, while he is a good guy and all that, will ever make an indelible impression.

If we thought it was any use, we would try to get into the intelligence department of the army. Now that we are permitted to know how many men have in we have in we are going over each week and what they are doing after they get there, we are all a blamed sight happier than we have been in a year.

Something will have to be done to keep our friend Enrico Caruso out of the poorhouse. He signed to appear in two musicals last week, and will receive only $200.00 for the two. There's something the matter with that boy. He needs a business manager.

The police of New York city will eliminate all unnecessary noises. This does not include Doug Fairbanks, who is in New York only occasionally.

Now that we have learned to love Josephus and Nevi and Herbert, maybe we can, with a little practice, learn to love George Creel and Doc. Garfield. Time works wonders.

Man in New York says he can tell a woman's disposition without marrying her. He is either the only man of his kind in the world or else he's a liar.

Just Folks

HE DIED FOR THE FLAG.

He died for the Flag! How easy to say it!
Yet how can man measure that sentence or weight it,
Or sum up the glories of earth that he tried for.

He died for the Flag! Was he selfishly dreaming?
Was he eager for fortune and sordidly scheming
With greed in his heart? Was he striving for treasure—
For soft days of comfort and indolent leisure?

Oh, no. He was fighting and tolling for others,
And this is his tribute—he died for his brothers.

He died for the Flag! Bravely passed from life's laughter;
That children might play in some sunny hereafter;
That mothers might live in contentment and gladness,
With never a tyrant to bring them to sadness.

He died for the freedom of comrades and stranger;
For God and for country he stood to death's danger;
For sweet days of labor, unmarred by oppression;
For the weak to rejoice in their right of possession.

For all that is noble, for all that is truthful,
He gave up his life when his days were still youthful.

He died for the Flag! And though long you shall mourn him,
The mantle of glory shall ever adorn him.
Unstained by dishonor, he went to his slumbers,
Undaunted by hate and its power—and its numbers.

He stood for man's fairest of visions, and teachings—
The prayers of his mother, the old pastor's preachings,
The glory of freedom, and homes glad with laughter,
Sweet peace at the fireside for all who come after.

No selfishness marred all the splendors he tried for.
The best in life lives in the Flag that he died for.

DISPUTES ORIGIN OF MYSTERY MOTOR

Elbert C. Kilpatrick.

An unfavorable report has been handed the interior department by the five scientists chosen by the government to review a test of the mysterious "Garaged" motor. Its inventor, Garabet T. E. Giragosian, claimed that the motor would run with no fuel except energy derived from the air. Now comes forward Elbert C. Kilpatrick of San Francisco who says that his "energy generator" is the same motor which Giragosian submitted, and that his invention antedated Giragosian's.

HOLDS RECORD FOR BAGGING PRISONERS

Frank Lenert.

The story of Frank Lenert's part in the war reads like a Jesse James novel, but it's true. Lenert, a Chicago boy, was captured alone by eighty-three Germans. He captured a German. He told his captives that the Americans were about to attack in large numbers. A barrage prevented the Germans reaching their own lines, so they surrendered to him to escape death. He marched them unaided to headquarters.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO BEING DRUNK

Martha Reynolds Displays Anger When Arraigned in Municipal Court For Being Drunk—Only Had One Drink of Whiskey.

Martha Reynolds stoutly denied in municipal court this morning that she was drunk and claimed that she had only taken one drink of whiskey which she used for medicine. She was very indignant when charged with not guilty to the charge of drunkenness and had her trial set for July 12th, at ten o'clock. She was lodged in the county jail in default of $100 bail. Charles Fisher, an old time offender, was the target this morning for a severe lecture from the judge. Fisher claimed that he did not think he should be in state prison, but Judge Maxfield attempted to point out to him where he was wrong. He was given a fine of twenty-five dollars and costs, or six months in the county jail. William Hession entered a plea of guilty to being drunk, and assured the judge that he did not intend to get drunk, and that it was the first time he had been arrested in three years. He was given a fine of ten dollars and costs of fifteen days.

RECEIVE ORDERS REGARDING ALIENS

Chief Champion Receives Letter From United States Marshal in Regard to Procedure After Arresting Alien Enemies.

Chief of Police Peter D. Champion has received a letter from Frank O'Connor, United States marshal, stating instructions in regard to the procedure to be made when an alien enemy is taken into custody.

Mr. O'Connor in his letter states that it is the opinion of many government officials that a great deal of time is wasted by city authorities after alien enemies have been arrested. The letter follows:

Sir: Acting under instructions from the attorney general of the United States, I desire to call your attention to the procedure which should be followed to legalize the detention of alien enemies taken into custody by you and held for federal investigation or action.

There has been in some parts of the country, cases where alien enemies have remained in jail for a considerable period of time without notification to the officials of the department of justice that the alien enemies have been arrested. This situation is probably due to the failure of the municipal, county and state authorities to fully understand the proper procedure in such cases.

Accordingly, whenever an alien enemy is arrested by you or under instructions from you, it is respectfully requested that you dispatch a telegram to me at government rate, collect, stating in not more than a hundred words the nationality of the alien enemy and the essential facts in regard to his case. This procedure will enable the officials of the department of justice to act at once, not only to protect the interests of the United States, but also to prevent violence to alien enemies.

Upon receipt of your telegram a warrant for the detention of the alien enemy will be immediately requested. The attorney general and an investigation will be conducted to ascertain whether or not the alien enemy should be interned for the duration of the war or prosecuted for violation of federal statutes.

Respectfully,
FRANK O'CONNOR,
United States Marshal.

Resume of Moving Picture Programs
Of Last Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Holman.)
More of the real thing and less of the make-believe is the aim of the managers of film production. In this way many elderly people and those with marked characteristics for certain parts are kept employed about the studios. Some foreigners have also been trained in the art of posing and are used instead of people made up for the parts required. Famous almost always accompanied by his Japanese valet, as is also Julian Pittman. Allice Lee, a Chinese girl who has taken a leading part in several pictures, is getting favorable mention, and several negro characters have been well taken in southern pictures. Perhaps Sessue Hayakawa, who appeared in the picture on Friday, is better known than any other of the foreign artists. In "The Honor of the House," the play was typically Japanese, and the cast included many Japanese house servants. The theme hinged on the idea held by Sessue, who is a Japanese scientist, that his wife is about to elope with another man. He gives her a locket (as a gift) which is impregnated with a subtle poison, that the honor of his house may be kept inviolate. When almost too late he finds out that the man is an unscrupulous suitor, and then he gives his life blood to save the life of his wife. It is well done and gives the oriental point of view very well.

Another oriental picture was presented in "Vengeance." In this Montagu Love represents a half-caste of India, who has a message of vengeance in England, when he is to avenge wrongs done to his father. A level stolen from an image of Buddha by his sweetheart complicates matters considerably.

Janet Gray gave a charming characterization of a little slavey in a boarding house suddenly raised to a position of heiress of wealth in the play "Rich Man, Poor Man." Here, she is the wrong person and she remains gracefully in favor of her sweet heart. She is dainty and sweet as always.

Mary Miles Minter was delayed on Sunday, so a substitute film was put on at the Majestic. It was "Intolerance" and portrayed the dangers encountered by a young girl who had been kept in ignorance of the love of her life. Miss Minter appeared on Monday in "The Beauty and the Beast." The story took up the adventures of Miss Minter, who was supposed to be a rich man's daughter, but her father was a thief who took her into the home as a gardener, and then he robbed the safe of the wealthy house, where she was kept, and she finally discovered and carried home in state.

"Empty Pockets" is a mystery story, where several red-headed women are implicated in a murder, until it is proven that the man died of heart disease.

"An American Live Wire" with Radio Williams as a consul stationed on an out of the way island, was given on Sunday at the Myers. Twelve adventures, which included the mistaking of an insurance agent for the president of the island, who was also taking a sudden leave with the treasury of the government, fell to the lot of the American consul. The scenes on the island were well staged and the whole thing was cleverly done.

The first of the week, including the fourth, was given over to a splendid patriotic play, "Over the Top," in which Arthur Guy Emery has a leading part. Several incidents of his book are shown in the pictures and the story is amplified to take in a girl character, as well as stirring scenes in France. The spy system in its work in New York City is shown, and the double dealing of German agents. The play closes with scenes in a chamber where Emery and his sweetheart are held prisoners, and escape by aeroplane to the American lines. Emery is as good in action as in writing, and the scenes on his face have been through. His scenes, where he enlisted volunteers to go abroad, are especially good, because they are really taken from street scenes, where he is detailed for that duty.

At the Apollo a repetition of the very stirring little amateur play

"Girls Over Here" was given on Tuesday. The other days the first part of the week were taken up by "The Yellow Ticket." In this play "Fannie Ward" was seen in the part of an American girl stranded in Russia, who receives word that her father is dying. She is refused passports by the government, and the only way she can find open to leave Russia is by receiving the yellow ticket of a prostitute. She is subjected to all kinds of indignities, even in the house of the American consul where she seeks refuge. All the time a Russian nobleman is making charges against her, trying to get her into his clutches. Finally a young American takes her part, proves these charges false and terrorizes the nobleman until he retracts his statements and helps the girl to get out of the country and they are married. Miss Ward does some splendid work in this play and the other parts are well taken. The scenery also, especially the interiors of Russian palaces, is finely staged, and the whole ensemble is very satisfactory.

FIVE LOVE LETTERS

By AGNES PLUMB.

(Copyright, 1918, by Western Newspaper Union.)

Colorado Springs, June 14.

My Dear Mr. Meredith:

I suppose I owe you an apology. I really ought to have let you know before I left Chicago, and would have done so had you troubled yourself to let me hear from you during my last two weeks at home. Of course I understand that our discussion of your absurd jealousy is the cause of your silence. I really did think you above such petty feelings, and trust by this time you have overcome them.

Very sincerely,

Caroline Carrolton.

II.

Colorado Springs, June 22.

My Dear Ted:

I wrote to you more than a week ago, and have received no answer. I didn't think you would stay angry at me so long—especially when I wrote you the first letter. Really, Ted, I'm awfully sorry I didn't let you know before I went away, but I was so wild at you! I am beginning to see that perhaps you had a little cause for your anger that night—just a little. Please write to me soon.

Yours,

Carol.

III.

Colorado Springs, June 29.

My Dear Ted:

By this time you must have had my second letter at least five days, and yet you won't answer. Well, I'm going to keep on writing till you do, for I'm bound you shall know that I still want you to forgive me. Please, Ted, please! I'll explain everything about that horrid drive, and I'll do anything to show how sorry I am and I was so mean about it that night, if you'll only write to me and tell me that you still love me. I know you do, for you aren't the kind to forget a girl in a hurry. It's strange that you can still love such a hateful thing as I am, but I feel sure you do. Oh, you must, Ted, darling.

If I don't hear from you soon, I'll go into the nursing business, and take care of a sick young man in this hotel. He is away down the hall, but the chambermaid sometimes tells me about him. It seems the poor fellow was knocked down on the street, where he ran out and picked up a baby who was on the car track. It was a brave act and made him a hero, but it broke his leg.

For my part, I am not interested in anyone now but my distant Ted, who

IV.

Colorado Springs, July 4.

Teddy Dear:

This is a pretty nice Fourth of July, but I don't care much. Do you remember the picnic we went to one year ago today? That was the first time you ever made love to me. I can see you yet as you stood in front of my hammock, talking so earnestly, and I laughed. Oh, well, I'm getting my pay now.

I'm going to tell you all about that horrid affair with Paul Elliot. I wish to goodness I'd told you before. It was this way. Of course, when I promised to go driving with you I meant to go, and I got ready and waited. You said "four o'clock," you know; and when you didn't come, and Paul did, at ten minutes past four, why, I said I'd go with him for meanness. I remembered how you disliked him, and I had made such a special point of being ready on time that I wanted to punish you for being late. I felt out up when we passed you down about a block driving so fast, for I knew what a horrid position it put you in, and how delighted Paul was; and besides, it was the first time you had ever failed to be on time.

Then that night when you came up and talked so awfully to me—you've no idea how stern and angry you were, Teddy, and how scared I was—why, I just wouldn't tell you how sorry I was. You made me lose my temper so quick that I didn't have time to tell you while I was repentant, and after that I didn't want to say anything but how angry I was.

You had never spoken to me so before, and—well, I didn't like it very much. I can't forget what you said when you left. You banged the door, too, Teddy, did you know it? It rings in my ears. "You never cared for me a bit, or you couldn't have put me in such a position. Since you won't explain, I'll go, and wait till you do." Those words hurt me more than I can tell, Teddy, and I can't forget them.

Now that I have at last explained, why you come back to me again? You know you said you would—and I can't live without you. Carol.

P. S. The lady next door is in, and is telling Aunt Mary about the young man with the broken leg. She says he is "such a fine, handsome fellow." I wish she could see my "fine, handsome fellow!" C. C.

The cowering girl stands petrified—the narrow eyes of the monster glued on his prey—when, like a bolt from the sky, a giant white form leaps from the fringe of fungus, straight for the panting beast, and, plunging headlong, landed full force on the lion's haunches, and an instant later the lion lay dead, strangled, and Good Recruiters.

A coquette, like a recruiting sergeant, is ever on the lookout for fresh victims.—Douglas Jerrold.

Give Your Child His Own Room.

In Farm and Fireside, a woman writing about children says:

"The craving for companionship is a powerful factor in the life of every boy or girl, but a certain amount of privacy and wholesome quiet is just as necessary to the child's development and happiness. I have known families where life was made miserable for everyone because of the constant bickering and quarreling among the children. When the house was enlarged so that each one could have his own room, they suddenly lost their fretful ways, and improved rapidly in disposition.

"It means a great deal to a boy or girl to know that his small possessions are sacred from the unsympathetic eyes and hands of the grown folks. I have always trained my children to respect each other's rights. Even if he hasn't a room to himself, each child has certain shelves, drawers and nooks sacred to his own use."

Sensible Table Discourse.

Speaking of autobiographic recipes for domestic use, there's nothing better than Benjamin Franklin's description of how the table was managed by that father when he was a boy. "At this table he took care to have some sensible friend to converse with and he always started a useful topic of discourse which might improve the minds of his children. By this means he turned our attention to the proper conduct of life and no critical notice was ever taken of the victuals on the table—whether they were cooked well or ill, whether they were in season or not of season. Thus I was brought up to be quite indifferent as to the kind of food that was set before me and to this day if I am asked after dinner to tell what I have dined upon I am scarce able to tell."

Spaniards Gave Name to Cigar.

However strange it may appear, it is a well-established fact that the word cigar is derived, though in a roundabout way, from the cicada—that is, from the Spanish "cigarra," the place where the cicada (in Spanish "cigarras") sings—the garden. The name cigarra is generally applied to a kind of pleasure garden and summer house (as in the cigarras de Toledo), and in Cuba in particular to a tobacco garden or nursery. After the discovery of the new world the Spaniards who planted tobacco in their gardens when offering the plant to their friends were wont to say: "Es un cigarro de mi cigarra," as we would say, "a flower from our garden." The name remained.

Spaniards Gave Name to Cigar.

However strange it may appear, it is a well-established fact that the word cigar is derived, though in a roundabout way, from the cicada—that is, from the Spanish "cigarra," the place where the cicada (in Spanish "cigarras") sings—the garden. The name cigarra is generally applied to a kind of pleasure garden and summer house (as in the cigarras de Toledo), and in Cuba in particular to a tobacco garden or nursery. After the discovery of the new world the Spaniards who planted tobacco in their gardens when offering the plant to their friends were wont to say: "Es un cigarro de mi cigarra," as we would say, "a flower from our garden." The name remained.

The Light in the Clearing

A TALE OF THE NORTH COUNTRY IN THE TIME OF SILAS WRIGHT.

BY IRVING BACHILLER

Author of Eben Holden, Etc.

Copyright, '17, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Mr. Latour, you and Purvis may go on slowly—I'll overtake you soon," I said.

"They went on and left me alone with Purvis. He was sitting excited and I wished to allay his fears.

"Don't let him try to serve me with or there'll be hell to pay in this valley," said Curtis.

"In that case, I shall not try to serve the writes. I don't want to stir up the neighborhood, but I want to know the facts. I shall try to see other tenants and repeat what they say. It may lead to a settlement."

We went on together to the top of the hill near which we had been standing. Far ahead saw a cloud of dust but no other sign of Latour and Purvis. They must have spurred their horses into a run. The fear came to me that Latour would try to serve the writes in spite of me. What a fool I had been not to call for them. My companion saw the look of concern in my face.

"I don't like that young fellow," said Curtis. "He's in for trouble."

He ran toward his horse, which was only a few rods beyond us, while I started on in pursuit of the two men at top speed. Before my horse had taken a dozen jumps I heard a horn blowing behind me and its echo in the hills. Within a half a moment a dozen horns were sounding in the valleys around me. What a contrast to the quiet in which we had been riding was this pandemonium which had broken loose in the countryside. A faint ahead I could see men running out of the hills. My horse had begun to lather, for the sun was hot. My companions were far ahead. I could not see the dust of their heels. I gave up trying to catch them and checked the speed of my horse and went on at a walk. The horns were still sounding. Some of the riders were miles away. About twenty rods ahead I saw three riders in strange costumes come out of a doorway and take the road at a gallop in pursuit of Latour and Purvis. They had not discovered me. I kept as calm as I could in the midst of this excitement. I remember laughing when I thought of the mess in which Mr. Purvis would shortly find himself.

I passed the house from which the three riders had just turned into the road. A number of women and an old man and three or four children stood on the porch. They looked at me in silence as I was passing and then began to hiss and boo. I gave me a feeling I have never known since that day. I jogged along over the brow of a hill when, at a white, frame house, I saw the center toward which all the men of the countryside were coming.

Suddenly I heard the hoof-beats of a horse behind me. I stopped, and looking over my shoulder saw a rider approaching me in the costume of an Indian chief. A red mask covered his face. A crest of eagle feathers adorned the edge of his cap. Without a word he rode on at my side. I knew not then that he was the man Josiah Curtis—nor could I at any time have sworn that it was he.

A crowd had assembled around the house ahead. I could see a string of horsemen coming toward it from the other side. I wondered what was going to happen to me. What a shouting and lowering in the crowded doorway! I could see the smoke of a fire. We reached the gate. Men in Indian masks and costumes gathered around us.

"Order! Silas! Silas!" was the loud command of the man beside me in whom I recognized or thought that I did—the voice of Josiah Curtis. "What has happened?"

"One of them tried to serve a writ on me," he answered. "He feathered him."

"Just then I heard the voice of Purvis shouting back in the crowd this impassioned order:

"Purvis, for God's sake, come here."

I turned to Curtis and said:

"If the gentleman tried to serve the writ on me, he has got it. The other fellow is simply a hired man who came along to take care of the horses. He couldn't tell the difference between a writ and a horse. He feathered him."

"When you have gone far enough," said Curtis, "this man is all right. Being the other man here and put out on their horses and I'll escort 'em out of the town."

They brought Latour on a rail amidst roars of laughter. What a bear-like, portly fellow, he looked like a pig. He was a hired man who came along to take care of the horses. He couldn't tell the difference between a writ and a horse. He feathered him."

"You ride along with me and let our feathered friends follow us."

"So we started up the road on our way back to Cobleskill. Soon Latour began to complain that he was hot and the feathers picked him."

"You come alongside me here and raise up a little and I'll pick the inside of your legs and pull out yer tail feathers," said Curtis. "If you got em stuck into yer skin you'd be a regular chicken and no mistake."

"I helped in the process and got my fingers hurt," said Curtis.

"This is a dangerous man to touch—his soul is tarred," said Curtis.

"Keep away from him."

"What a lookin' stick you he!" he laughed as he went on with the picking.

We resumed our journey. Our guide left us at the town line some three miles beyond.

"Thank God the danger is over," said Purvis. "The tar on my neck has melted and I can run my shirt sticks like a stick on a tree. I'm sick of the smell of myself. If I could find a skunk I'd enjoy holdin' him in my lap a while. I'm goin' back to St. Lawrence county about as straight as I can go. I never did like this country anyway."

He had picked the feathers out of his neck and Latour was now busy picking his arms and shoulders. Presently he took off his feathered cap and threw it away, saying:

"They'll have to pay for this. Every one of those jackrabbits will have to settle with me."

"You ought to be on yourself," I said. "You ran away from me and got all into trouble by being too smart. You tried to be a fool and succeeded beyond your expectation. My testimony wouldn't help you any."

"You're always against the capitalist," he answered.

It was dark when I left my companions and had my supper and found Judge Westbrook in his home and reported the talk of Curtis and my adventure and my view of the situation.

"I observed that he knew the latter a cold welcome."

"I shall send the sheriff and a posse," he said with a twinkling eye. "I think it will make a bad matter worse." I answered.

"We must not forget that the patrons are our clients," he remarked. "I yielded and went on with my work. In the next week or so I satisfied myself of the rectitude of my opinions. Then came the most critical part in my history—I conflict with Purvis and on one side and conscience on the other."

The judge raised my salary. I wanted the money, but every day I would have to lend my help directly or indirectly, to the prosecution of claims which I could not believe in. My heart went out of my work. I began to fear myself. For weeks I had not the courage to take issue with the learned judge.

One evening I went to his home determined to put an end to my unhappiness. After a little talk I told him frankly that I thought the patrons should seek a friendly settlement with their tenants.

"Because their position is unjust, un-American and untenable," was my answer.

He rose and gave me his hand and a smile of forbearance and consideration for my youth, as I took it.

I left much irritated and spent a sleepless night in the course of which I decided to cling to the ideals of David Hoffman and Silas Wright.

In the morning I resigned my place and asked to be relieved as soon as the convenience of the judge would allow it. He tried to keep me with gentle persuasion and higher pay, but I was firm. Then I wrote a long letter to my friend the Senator.

Again I had chosen my way and with due regard to the compass.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Man With the Scythe.

It was late in June before I was able to disengage myself from the work of the judge's office. Meanwhile there had been blood shed in the hills. One of the sheriff's posse had been severely wounded by a bullet and had failed to serve the writs. The judge had appealed to the governor. People were talking of "the rent war."

Purvis had returned to St. Lawrence county and hired to my uncle for the having. He had sent me a letter which the sheriff had been able to deliver. It was dated the day he left the stage at Canton. He had seen Miss Dunkelberg on the street.

"She was lookin' top-notch—stop and spoke to me," he went on. "You could a knocked me down with a feather. I was that smart. She ast me how you was. I took her plum in the eye and I says, all grissled from his head to his heels, 'orse an' able lick Lew Latour,' which I seen him do a long time an' tolarable severe. He can fight like a bob-tailed cat when he gets a-going."

What a recommendation to the sweet, unsullied spirit of Sally! Without knowledge of my provocation what would she think of me? He had endowed me with all his friendliness of his own cherished ideal, and what was I to do about it? Well, I was going home and would try to see her.

What a joy entered my heart when I was about the steamboat at last, and on my way to all most dear to me! As I entered Lake Champlain I consulted the map and decided to leave the boat at Chimney Point to take to the schooner, who had written in the schoolmaster from Canterbury. My aunt had said in a letter that old Kate was living there and that a great change had come over her. So I went ashore and hired a horse of the ferryman—one of those "Green Mountain ponies" of which my uncle had told me. They'll take any gait that suits 'em, except a slow one, an' keep it to the bone of the road."

I think that I never had a horse so bent on reaching that traditional "end of the road." He was what they call a "cracker," those days, and a rocking-chair was not easier to ride. He took me swiftly across the wide flat and over the hills and seemed to resent my effort to slow him.

I passed through Middlebury and rode into the grounds of the college, where the senator had been educated, and on out to Weybridge to see where he had lived as a boy. I found the Wrights lived in a comfortable white house at the head of a beautiful valley with wooded hills behind it—and rode on to the door. A white-haired old lady in a black lace cap was sitting on its porch looking out at the sunset hills.

"Is this where Senator Wright lived when he was a boy?" I asked.

"Yes, sir," the old lady answered. "I was from Canton."

"You from Canton?" she exclaimed. "Why, of all things! That's where my home is. I'm glad to see you. Go an' put your horse in the barn."

I dismounted and she came near me. "Silas Wright is my boy," she said. "What is your name?"

"Barton Baynes," I answered as I hitched my horse.

"Barton Baynes? Why, Silas has told me all about you in his letters. He writes to me every week. Come and sit down."

We sat down together on the porch. He was going to leave your place in Cobleskill," she continued to my surprise. "He said that he was glad you had decided not to stay."

It was joyful news to me, for the Senator's silence had worried me and I had begun to think with alarm of my future. I have known the mother's joy that he would take you to Washington to help him. The poor man has too much to do."

"I should think it a great privilege to go," I answered.

"You have brought up just as he was. I used to read to him every evening when the candles were lit. How hard he worked to make a man of himself. I have known the mother's joy that he would take you to Washington to help him. The poor man has too much to do."

Milton News

Milton, July 6.—The Fourth of July celebration was a success. There was a good attendance despite counter attractions, nearby towns being well represented. The singing under the direction of Prof. A. E. Whitford was excellent. The address by Superintendent Holt of Edgerton was a patriotic and stirring talk that received close attention and frequent applause. It was the subject of universal commendation. At the noon hour the Parks were filled with happy picnickers. The games for boys and girls were put on after the dinner hour and thrift stamps were given as prizes. A list of the winners in the various events will appear later.

The exhibition by the Boy Scouts, under Scoutmaster Scott, was fine, and the parade by about seventy-five lads of the Red Cross in uniform was thrilling. Six of them carried a flag in which the sum of sixty-one dollars was deposited by the spectators.

The ball game was an attraction that drew a big crowd. Milton and Milton Junction teams contested and it was won by Milton eleven to six. Both teams put up a good game, except in that third inning, when the Junction went to pieces and allowed Milton to score seven runs. The batteries were good, Milton having the best pitcher of the two. The Milton line up was Dan Mullen-Alexander, pitcher; Klitzke-Schuk, catcher; Randall-Walker, short stop; Champion, Chick Gandill, 1st base; Stillman-Edie Collins, 2nd base; Oakley-Zimmerman, 3rd base; Millan-John Collins, right field; Mullen-Ty Cobb, center field; Mullen-Les Mann, left field. Al C. Whitford, umpire.

The band gave a concert in the evening to a large audience. Much credit for the success of the celebration is due to W. L. Crandall, chairman of the committee, and his able and willing assistants.

Oxy-Acetylene Welding Properly Executed By L. C. Heller, 65 S. River St.

Oxy-Acetylene Welding, the process of cutting and welding castings and broken metals, is one of the most wonderful and interesting enterprises in the world. It is the process of mechanically mixing oxygen and acetylene gases and by means of a torch concentrating the flame to a small white hot glow that will cut through the thickest metals. Then by melting the castings or broken parts and applying the proper melting metals, a good experienced welder can so cement together broken parts that they are as good and as strong as when they were new.

To weld by the process of Oxy-Acetylene Welding looks very simple and easy to most people, but more so than any other business, this demands a great deal of study and principally, good hard every-day experience and lots of it.

Mr. Heller without question is the oldest, the best and most experienced Oxy-Acetylene Welder in the southern part of Wisconsin. In 1912 F. B. Burton brought the first Oxy-Acetylene Welding outfit to this city. Mr. Heller immediately saw the big future offered by this contrivance and at once entered Mr. Burton's employ as a welder. He remained there but two years when he purchased an outfit of his own and started in business in his present location at 65 S. River St.

At this time Mr. Heller also conducted a blacksmith shop and general engine and overhauling repair shop, but it was not long before his Oxy-Acetylene Welding business grew by leaps and bounds so that today with the exception of doing a little gasoline engine overhauling and repairing, Mr. Heller is engaged in Oxy-Acetylene Welding work, at which he is a genius.

Mr. Heller is enjoying a fine business, having a large trade that comes from all the surrounding towns and villages, in fact he covers the southern part of the state. He has worked up this business by hard industrious everyday "Keeping at it."

Mr. Heller will guarantee all work turned out by him; he makes it a specialty of either doing all work right and so that it will stay right, or not do it at all. He is at all times very frank; if he cannot repair and weld any broken part as it should be, he will tell you so; thus saving the person unnecessary expense and loss of time.

Oxy-Acetylene Welding is the proper and only solution for broken castings, metals and parts. One should not overlook this wonderful process when in such troubles. New castings and parts of all kinds are unusually expensive in these war times, and secondly because of poor shipments are very hard to get when wanted. Save money, time and worry and always consult L. C. Heller at 65 S. River street.

Don't throw away your broken farm machinery, automobile cylinders, crank cases, furnace and stove parts, tools and all kinds of metal castings. Let me weld them and make them just like new by the process of

Oxy-Acetylene Welding

I have had years of experience, and I will guarantee all my work. My prices are most reasonable. It is much cheaper and much quicker to have a part welded than to buy a new one. Be sure to consult me before throwing away any castings or broken parts of any kind.
